Our Production Lines of Dried Dates

Our complete palm dates processing line includes selecting, sorting, brushing, washing and drying sections. These processes assure quality and premium value. In the first phase, dates originated from our farms are selected by our quality control (Q.C) experts, and then go into the fridge. Next, They are all sorted and the poor quality ones are separated from the mass production. Next phase is about washing and brushing of the products with updated technology machinery. In phase fourth, the washed dates enter the cooling tunnel for the sake of dehydration. Afterwards, they pass from the heating tunnel and the drying and pasteurizing process is done in 110°C degree. All the processed dates will be sorted again in phase sixth of the production line and the final packing and labeling process is done next. After the confirmation of quality control experts (Q.C) in quarantining phase, finally the high quality dates go into the fridge to meet beyond customers' expectation.
